Britton (1980) mentions only Gombe NP for Tanzania and this this bird is "fairly common" there. Hopefully it has been overlooked in recent years. The single record in the TBAP database is from 1991. The other two records, from Minziro in Nov 93 and riverine forest NE of Mahale in August 2005 suggest it is more widespread but it is evidently a low density species at the very edge of its range.
